Mission

JSLHR publishes peer-reviewed research and other scholarly articles on the normal and disordered processes in speech, language, hearing, and related areas such as cognition, oral-motor function, and swallowing. The journal is an international outlet for both basic research on communication processes and clinical research pertaining to screening, diagnosis, and management of communication disorders as well as the etiologies and characteristics of these disorders. JSLHR seeks to advance evidence-based practice by disseminating the results of new studies as well as providing a forum for critical reviews and meta-analyses of previously published work.

Scope

The broad field of communication sciences and disorders, including speech production and perception; anatomy and physiology of speech and voice; genetics, biomechanics, and other basic sciences pertaining to human communication; mastication and swallowing; speech disorders; voice disorders; development of speech, language, or hearing in children; normal language processes; language disorders; disorders of hearing and balance; psychoacoustics; and anatomy and physiology of hearing.

Impact Factor

The Journal Citation Reports® 2015 Impact Factor is 1.526, and the 5-year Impact Factor is 1.883. JSLHR ranks 13th of 25 journals in the Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology category and 31st of 65 journals in the Rehabilitation category of the Science Citation Index, as well as 21st of 178 journals in the Linguistics category and 19th of 74 journals in the Rehabilitation category of the Social Science Citation Index.
